Fundraising guide

Fundraising for Inherit Your Rights is fun and easy, and makes a valuable contribution to our cause. Your efforts will help us educate, empower and represent more women in Tanzania.

Fundraising ideas

There are many ways you can fundraise and support Inherit Your Rights including:

Do you have a birthday coming up? This year, consider giving up your birthday in the name of Inherit Your Rights and asking friends and family to make a small donation instead of gifts.

Organise a bake sale at your work. Get a few of your colleagues on board to bake some cakes, cookies and other goodies and ask for a small donation for each piece. Also consider asking the organisation to match the total amount raised to double your impact.

Night in: Get a group of friends together for a fun night in. You and your friends can contribute the money you would have otherwise spent going out to our cause, while enjoying a pot luck dinner or a movie or games night.

Climb Kilimanjaro: Take your support to the next level. Volunteer with or visit us in Tanzania and while here take on the challenge of climbing Kilimanjaro in the name of Inherit Your Rights. Take the cause of women's rights to the roof of Africa and mobilise your networks to raise awareness and much needed funds for our cause.

Get started

- To begin fundraising with us, create a page through Just Giving.
- On Just Giving share your story. Make it heartfelt and personal to inspire others to support you.
- Write an email to your family and friends and share more detail on your personal motivation behind what you are doing and what impact it will have. Encourage others to join you and get involved as well.
- Share your page on your social media networks. Don't forget to share on LinkedIn as well.
- Thank you supporters. Just Giving will notify you when someone has donated to your fundraiser. Show your appreciation by following up personally with a phone call, email or social media shout out to thank them for their support.
- People often need a few reminders before giving. Remind people over email and social media and share some updates on your fundraising target, thank those who have already given and share some stories of the women their contribution will be assisting.
- After your event or activity is over, send another update to all your supporters to tell them how much was raised, report back on the activity and the long term impact that their funds will have.
